San Francisco hotel to get tech and art installations

The 393-key Stanford Court hotel in San Francisco's Nob Hill neighborhood will undergo a renovation in 2014 that will include high-tech design concepts and art installations that reflect the city.

In the lobby, a live-feed video installation will relay views from the hotel's rooftop camera, with an 80-inch flat screen TV depicting scenes of the bay and adjacent areas. Kiosks with iMac and iPad products also will be available in the lobby, with the Tech Bar arriving in early 2014, offering guests the capability to use the latest gadgets. Curated artwork by up-and-coming local artists will also be a centerpiece of the updated property, said Highgate Hotels, the property's management company.
